Andino's obligations

- Pick up, transport and deliver the goods within the times committed in the proposal.
- Maintain the cold chain in refrigerated services and provide the temperature log when the customer requests it.
- Take out the transport insurance that corresponds to the declared value of the goods.

Customer's obligations

- Hand over the goods properly packed, labeled and with the required documentation.
- Declare the value of the goods and any special handling conditions.
- Pay invoices within the term agreed in the proposal.

Penalty for delay

In case of a delivery delay attributable to Andino, a penalty of 0.5% per day on the value of the service applies, capped at 10%. No penalty applies when the delay is due to an unforeseeable event, force majeure or incorrect information from the customer.

Term and renewal

The standard term is 12 months with automatic renewal, unless notice is given 60 days in advance. Either party may terminate the contract for serious breach by the other, after written notice allowing 15 days to cure.

Liability and claims

Claims for shortages or damage must be submitted in writing within 5 working days after delivery. Andino's liability is limited to the declared value of the affected goods.

Jurisdiction

The parties submit to the competent courts of Montevideo, Uruguay.

Rates and invoicing

Rates are those of the accepted proposal and are updated according to the adjustment mechanism it sets out. Andino invoices the services provided monthly, and invoices show the detail of routes, pallets transported and surcharges applied. The customer has the payment term agreed in the proposal; late payments accrue default interest.

Confidentiality

The parties keep confidential the commercial and operational information they access under the contract, including rates, volumes and recipients' data. This obligation continues after the contract ends.

Personal data protection

When providing the service involves the processing of recipients' personal data, the parties comply with Uruguayan personal data protection regulations and use the data only for delivering the goods.

Excluded goods

The contract does not cover goods prohibited by law, explosive material or undeclared hazardous goods. Andino may refuse to carry goods that do not meet packaging or documentation conditions, informing the customer of the reason.

Subcontracting

Andino may subcontract part of the transport to trusted third parties, remaining responsible to the customer and requiring subcontractors to meet equivalent safety and insurance conditions.

Notices

Notices between the parties are made in writing, to the addresses and email addresses stated in the proposal. Changes of address must be notified in advance.
